Cops bust 'molly' dealers, investigate ODs at concert

Club drug. The drug known as "molly" has been eyed as the possible cause of overdoses at two recent Boston concerts.

At about the same time state and local police seized heroin and another drug suspected to be molly during a raid in Brockton, three more people overdosed during a concert at the Bank of America Pavilion.

"Molly," a name used for the powder form of MDMA, which is the chemical used in Ecstasy, has been suspected in various overdoses in Boston and New York City within the last week. A 19-year-old New Hampshire girl died and two other people were hospitalized after apparently overdosing during an EDM concert at the House of Blues last week.

On Saturday night, three men were taken to the hospital after they were found to be suffering from the symptoms of a drug overdose during a concert at the Bank of America Pavilion. Sound Tribe Sector 9, a rock and electronic music group, performed that night.

Boston police said detectives are investigating the incident.

Also Saturday night, state police said troopers and Brockton police arrested three people during a joint operation. The people were arrested on outstanding warrants and drug charges.

During the operation police seized 12 grams of heroin and 16 grams of what they believed to be molly.

Authorities in New York City are also investigating the death of a University of New Hampshire student who suffered an apparent overdose believed to be from molly taken during a music festival last weekend, according to the Globe.

Somerville teens face rape charges

The suspects are members of the Somerville High School junior varsity soccer team. / TWP VIA WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

A Somerville High School boys soccer player will be in court today to answer to charges that he and two other players raped other students while at a student-athlete retreat in western Massachusetts.

Galileo Mondol, 17, and two 16-year-olds who were not identified because of their age, were arrested Friday by state police.

Mondol faces charges including aggravated rape of a child under 16, assault and battery and witness intimidation, according to the Berkshire district attorney's office. The juveniles face similar charges and their cases will be heard in juvenile court.

The alleged incident took place Aug. 25 at Camp Lenox in Otis, where Somerville High School hosted a retreat for student-athletes. Authorities said Mondol and the two 16-year-olds, who are all juniors and members of the junior varsity soccer team, entered a cabin occupied by freshmen students and assaulted three victims.

In a joint statement, Somerville Mayor Joseph Curtatone and Superintendent Tony Pierantozzi called the incident disturbing.

"We are disturbed and appalled that these crimes may have taken place, and our thoughts and concerns are with the victims and their families," they said.

Move-in madness

Police respond to Bentley parties

Police were called to various gatherings at Bentley University over the weekend involving hundreds of students.

Officers were called to multiple locations Sunday night for the large gatherings on the Waltham campus, according to WCVB.

Three students were taken to the hospital for alcohol-related illnesses.

A spokeswoman told WCVB that Sunday was move-in day at the school.

Classes are scheduled to begin today. METRO

BPS parents can now track kid's bus

It's 7 a.m. Do you know where your child is?

Parents with children in the Boston Public Schools can now say "yes."

A new website lets parents track exactly where their child is as they ride the bus to and from school. The "Where's my school bus?" website gives parents real time updates on the location of the bus. Parents will need their child's student identification number and date of birth to login. In Boston, the first day of school is Wednesday. Kindergarten begins next week. METRO

Fire knocks out power to portion of MBTA's Red Line

T trouble. A fire that damaged several subway cables caused "extensive" destruction on the Red Line.

Travelers who depend on the MBTA's rapid transit were no doubt annoyed this Labor Day Weekend after a fire that damaged several subway electrical cables caused service disruptions on the Red Line.

Bus shuttles were running between the JFK/UMass station and Park Street station yesterday due to power outages, but T officials were hopeful that full service would be restored for today's commute.

"Workers in the tunnel are making significant progress," MBTA spokeswoman Kelly Smith said yesterday. "The crews will work through the night. The MBTA has every intention of operating regularly scheduled Red Line service [Tuesday] morning."

Busing on the Red Line
NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Boston firefighters responded to reports of a fire on the tracks at Broadway station around 10:30 p.m. Saturday.

The intense heat of the fire caused damage to adjacent cables, melting them together, according to MBTA spokesman Joe Pesaturo, who described the damage as "extensive," and the work "complex."

T officials kept its 44,606 Twitter followers updated by tweeting photographs of crews repairing the damage.

While some seasoned T riders were less forgiving, @Moenypenny was one of the few to express gratitude for being kept in the loop.

"@mbtaGM I appreciate the updates! Fingers crossed that the red line will be up tomorrow morning!"

Mating season

Mass. motorists warned of moose

Wildlife experts are cautioning Bay State motorists to be wary of moose activity in the roadways as September marks the start of the animals' breeding season.

Male moose will often chase female moose across roads and become unaware of traffic, The Division of Fisheries and Wildlife said.

Officials said moose can weigh from 500 to 1,000 pounds and the top-heavy animals are less likely than deer to move from the road. METRO

Kerry, Hagel to testify at Senate hearing on Syria

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry and Secretary of Defense Chuck Hagel will be witnesses at a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing on the authorization of the use of military force in Syria, the committee said.

Russian officials want to fly to Washington to sway Syria vote

Russian lawmakers want to travel to Washington to urge Congress not to back President Obama's plan for military strikes on Syria, the speaker of the upper house of parliament told President Vladimir Putin yesterday.

Dismissing U.S. accusations that the Syrian government had killed hundreds of its own people with poison gas as nothing but "talk," senior legislator Valentina Matviyenko said both chambers were ready to send delegations.

Russia is one of the main allies of Syrian President Bashar al-Assad and has already blocked several Western-led resolutions in the U.N. Security Council to sanction him over his crackdown on the uprising.

"I think if we manage to establish a dialogue with our partners in the U.S. Congress, to exchange arguments, we could possibly better understand each other," Matviyenko, speaker of the Federation Council, told Putin at his residence near Moscow.

Obama and aides confront Congress on Syria strike

Decision. Polls show the public is largely opposed to U.S. military action.

President Barack Obama and his top aides launched a full-scale political offensive over the weekend to persuade a skeptical Congress to approve a military strike against Syria, but faced a struggle to win over lawmakers from both parties and a war-weary American public.

Obama made calls to members of the House of Representatives and Senate, underscoring the task confronting the administration before it can go ahead with using force in response to a deadly chemical attack blamed on the Syrian government.

Dozens of lawmakers, some in tennis shirts or shirtsleeves, cut short their vacations and streamed into the corridors of the Capitol building for a Sunday afternoon intelligence briefing on Syria with Obama's national security team.

When they emerged nearly three hours later, there was no immediate sign that the many skeptics in Congress had changed their minds. Many questioned the broad nature of the measure Obama is seeking, suggesting it needed to be narrowed.

Just what happened with today's cover?

Double take. No, it wasn't a publishing error. Today's rather different cover is to bring awareness to this year's Metro Photo Challenge. Learn how you can enter.

If you noticed that today's cover of Metro was a bit more, well, international than usual, you would be correct. We joined Metros from all of the world — we publish 71 editions in 23 countries — who ran covers today in different languages to bring awareness to this year's Metro Photo Challenge. We wanted to prove the point that pictures speak a universal language, understood by all (did it work?).

The Metro Photo Challenge is the world's biggest photography competition open to amateurs and professionals alike. For the 2013 Challenge, photographers will "sense" the world through photography, submitting in five categories representing the human senses (sight, hearing, taste, smell and touch), plus an additional "sixth sense," an open-ended category for photographers to interpret in their own creative way. To submit your photos, go to www.metrophotochallenge.com or submit via Instagram using the hashtag #MPC2013. You can use the app's editing, filters and enhancement — but only in the "sixth sense" category.

Starting tomorrow, Metro will publish a daily winner both in print and online at www.metro.us. At the end of the Challenge on Oct. 13, we will pick a U.S. winner to be entered into our international contest. This global grand prize winner will receive a once-in-a-lifetime trip with a social twist. In partnership with Reach for Change, Metro will arrange an eight-day trip to Ghana, West Africa. METRO

This submission was a contender in last year's Metro Photo Challenge. / YE PYAE

How to enter MPC:

- Go to www.metrophotochallenge.com to upload your submission (there are no limits to how many you can post). You can also upload via Instagram with the hashtag #MPC2013. Remember: The use of filters are only allowed in the "sixth sense" category.
- To see what others are submitting, follow @metrophotochallenge on Instagram.

Woman swims from Cuba to Florida, sets world record

American 64-year-old long-distance swimmer Diana Nyad yesterday became the first person to swim across the Florida Straits from Cuba without a shark cage, succeeding on her fifth attempt at the feat.

Nyad came ashore about 53 hours after she set off from Havana, completing the estimated 110-mile journey and setting a record for the longest ocean swim without a shark cage or flippers, according to her crew.

She was met by crowds in Key West who surrounded her, snapping photos, when she staggered ashore as they were enjoying sunny beach weather on the annual Labor Day holiday.

Helpers were waiting to give her medical treatment and immediately placed her on a stretcher and hydrated her with an IV, before she was taken to a hospital. Her face looked sunburned except around the eyes, where she had been covered by goggles, and her lips were swollen. REUTERS

Cyber hacked

Pro-Syria hackers put anti-attack message on US Marines site

Computer hackers aligned with Syrian President Bashar al-Assad struck an Internet recruiting site for the U.S. Marine Corps yesterday, urging troops to "refuse your orders" if the United States attacks Syria.

The attack appeared to be the work of the Syrian Electronic Army, which also recently targeted the New York Times' website and Twitter.

The hackers posted a message and images on the website www.marines.com, signing it "delivered by SEA," a reference to the Syrian Electronic Army. REUTERS

'Fifty Shades' movie adaptation casting revealed

DAKOTA JOHNSON
WIREIMAGE

Do we still care about "Fifty Shades of Grey"? I feel like the publishing phenomenon has already been cast aside to pop culture's 99-cent bin. But I've doubted the force that is middle-aged suburban women who live vicariously through poorly written fictional characters (see: "Twilight") for some time.

If you find yourself in the die-hard "Fifty Shades" category, you'll be happy to know that casting for the film adaptation is settled. On Monday, author E.L. James tweeted, "I am delighted to let you know that the lovely Dakota Johnson has agreed to be our Anastasia." Less than an hour later, James announced that "Sons of Anarchy" star Charlie Hunnam will be the male lead.

You've seen Johnson in "Ben and Kate" as well "The Social Network." Hunnam was just recently in "Pacific Rim."

Putting the labor back into Labor Day

No rest for the famous. James Franco made two huge appearances over the weekend at the Venice International Film Festival, one for his latest directorial effort, "Child of God," on Saturday and Gia Coppola's "Palo Alto," in which he stars, on Sunday, pictured here. Then, on Monday night, he probably saddled up to a bar somewhere to watch the Comedy Central roast of himself, which aired last night but was filmed on Aug. 25. And here I thought it was rough sitting in traffic?/ GETTY IMAGES

By the way, this book is 100 percent real

Textual satisfaction. "Texts From Bennett" creator Mac Lethal wrote a novel.

Two years ago, a Tumblr blog featuring the text messages of a "17-year-old white boy who thinks he's a Crip, works at Amoco and has a girlfriend named Mercedes" almost broke the Internet, so immense was its popularity and reach.

If you don't know what we're talking about, we assume you were living under a very large rock in late 2011, because "Texts From Bennett" might be one of the defining Internet memes of our time.

The blog, which instantly whipped the web into a frenzy of delight, horror and speculation, is the creation of Kansas City rapper Mac Lethal (aka David Sheldon) who felt that his wannabe-gangster cousin Bennett's lovably crass, inane texts were too good not to share. Now, he has turned the Tumblr into a novel, a narrative about Bennett and his mom, Lethal's Aunt Lillian, living with him for a summer. Lethal checked in from his "Texts From Bennett Tour," during which he'll be signing copies of the book and performing live.

People were weirdly pissed when they found out who you were and Bennett's veracity came into question.
People get more upset and impassioned about "Texts From Bennett" than they do about me bashing religion or making political statements. ... It's a wannabe gangster with a stuffed bunny rabbit.

Lethal on exposure

Do you think this exposure has helped your music career or hurt it?
I don't know; in 2013 it's hard to gauge if careers can be helped or hurt. Most of them exist, have peaks and valleys, become hot, become cold, become hot again. Miley Cyrus is the hottest thing in the world right now, but we can't say that it's necessarily helping her. So I try not to focus on reputation or keeping track of my blemishes. Some stuff works, some stuff doesn't. All I know is since 2002 I have never had a year that wasn't more eventful than the one before it. So it's all been good.

How is it that Bennett didn't come across the Tumblr right away?
People like Bennett don't have access to the Internet. Bennett goes outside and is social with people. Which is strangely ironic considering all the detractors of the blog just sit around drinking Mountain Dew floats all day, playing "Call of Duty."

He must know about it by now. How did he react?
He just wanted to know if he could get cute girls with "big titties" because of his newfound fame.

Who says summer fun had to end yesterday? / PROVIDED

Port Royal rooms boast impressive views. / RYAN MOREY RHM PHOTOGRAPHY

Stealing one last summer vacation

Morey's Piers. We promise, this isn't anything like that other Jersey Shore.

Traditionally, Labor Day (and the start of school) means the end of summer vacations and weekend jaunts to the beach. But as the gorgeous weather continues to hold out (thanks, global warming!), there's no reason not to grab the kids or a group of friends for one last getaway.

One location that's easy to visit and especially perfect for families — and conveniently open through Columbus Day — is Morey's Piers & Beachfront Waterparks in Wildwood, N.J. (www.moreyspiers.com). About a six-hour drive from Boston, this shore spot is not quite like any other resort town or theme park city in the nation.

Tracing its boardwalk-entertainment origins back to 1969, Morey's Piers is now the largest waterfront theme park in the Western Hemisphere, with more than 100 rides and attractions spanning about two miles of seascape.

Between the piers are seemingly endless ice cream and pizza shops, arcades, souvenirs stands and other such carnivalesque fare. If you don't have the energy to walk up and down all day, you can catch the Sightseer Tram Car for $3 per ride (but many tourism booths sell reduced-price day and weekend passes).

Although the area is primarily geared toward groups with younglings, adults can also have a good time at one of the many local bars and restaurants.

Or, of course, you can just enjoy the beach and people-watching, plus the chance to get away from the hustling humdrum of city life just one more time this summer, basking in Wildwood's all-too-easy-to-believe fantasy that sunny days are here to stay.

Overnight

Where to stay

While visiting, you can also stay at a property owned by Morey's, such as Port Royal, which offers apartment-like hotel rooms with balconies, views of the beach, mini-kitchens and plenty of space to spread out.

Downstairs is a restaurant, a pool and a kiddie pool, a game room and a quieter lounge spot for parents.

When you stay at one of the four participating Morey Resorts (starting at $99 per night), you can get a "Stay and Play" package through Sept. 15, which means big savings on unlimited access to Morey's three piers (Mariner's Pier, Adventure Pier, Surfside Pier) and two waterparks (Ocean Oasis and Raging Waters).

Keep the kids in the kitchen

Secret ingredient.
Little hands can be a big help when it comes to cooking.

Many parents' intuition might be to shoo children out of the kitchen.

But the next time your kiddos are underfoot while you're making dinner, consider tossing them a task.

Cooking with kids can be a great way to bond, create healthy habits and make something great for lunch.

Sally Sampson, who created ChopChop, a cooking magazine for families, suggests starting small: Let them pick a vegetable at the farmers market to add to a salad, or throw veggies into a blender to create a smoothie. Kids can also create their own salad dressings.

One thing she cautions against? Inviting the help for dessert.

Cooking works even with the littlest ones. "You can describe what you're doing," Sampson adds. "You can have them hand you carrots. No age is too young."

And cooking can be much healthier — and cheaper — than parents might think.

Massachusetts program Cooking Matters aims to help low-income families make delicious, affordable meals.

Getting the kiddos involved in the kitchen can be a bonding experience, as well as a way to open them up to diverse foods.
WAVEBREAK MEDIA

Director Alicia McCabe advises asking children each day whether they ate different colors in the rainbow — for example, if they ate anything green — and making it a daily game.

"I think a lot of that is just getting parents to imagine a slightly different way of doing things," she says.

One last tip: Don't forget to include them in the cleanup.

- Green: spinach, lettuce, pesto, fresh herbs, cukes, avocado, sliced green apple
- Purple: cabbage slaw

Wash your hands with soap and water, then gather all your kitchen gear and ingredients and put them on a clean counter. Start with whole-wheat bread and your favorite sliced cheese, then lay on the color.

Horoscope

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22.
Deal with personal responsibilities before they make your life difficult. Ask for help if you need it, but don't ignore what has to be done.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22.
A new activity or hobby will result in a relationship that could be seminal. Be confident and share your thoughts, and the world will be your oyster.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21.
Check out your options regarding living arrangements and the places and opportunities that entice you. Be innovative and change what isn't working for you.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21.
Bravado and control will help you bring about the changes that you want to make, but you should expect to face some scrutiny from an outside source. Be honest and stand firm.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20.
Size up your financial and professional situations. Consider ways to improve and maintain your hard-won achievements. Be consistent.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18.
Enjoy time spent with someone special. Take part in events that can change your financial situation and lead to long-term contacts. It's a good time to make a big pitch.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20.
Listen carefully to what's being said in a business involvement. What you offer will exceed what you get in return. Consider working independently.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20.
Take on a challenge that will boost your ego and result in general improvement. If you share your feelings, you'll charm someone with whom you want to spend more time.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21.
Consider what everyone else is doing before you make a final decision regarding a career matter. Being cautious will save you from getting into an argument or getting hurt.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20.
You're in a good cycle for travel. You will meet interesting people and discover something to incorporate into your everyday routine.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22.
Practical improvements on the home front will open up more time. You'll be drawn to something unusual that could bring big changes.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22.
Put your energy to good use today instead of wasting time being angry. Focus on positive changes that will enable you to accomplish more. Don't give in to unreasonable demands.

Flags are not meant to be curtains

Re: 'Man fights to keep US flag in his condo window' (Metro, Aug. 28) I would hope no one gets the impression from the story that the condo association is made up of a bunch of mean-spirited, unpatriotic fussbudgets. I suspect many of them are veterans, community volunteers, public servants, etc. I would support keeping the requirement that windows have white curtains if that is what the condo owners agreed to. In any case, to me it seems disrespectful to use the U.S. flag as a replacement for a curtain. Perhaps the condo association would consider properly displaying a flag from a pole near the entrance to the building.

More supply than demand in grad market

Re: 'Graduates pointless without jobs' (Metro, Aug. 28) What letter writer Joe Alloy fails to allow for is that there is a disproportion between jobs that pay well and people who are properly educated or trained to fill those jobs. The other side of the problem is that employers, also overlooked here, have learned over the last five years that higher productivity with fewer employees appears to be working (for them) for the short-term; this in turn causes more demand for lesser jobs, lowering wages for those who CAN get the jobs while leaving even more people without gainful (if you can call it that) employment. Where I DO agree, although not on who to blame, is that the creation of more jobs is necessary. Fix the roads, fix the infrastructure, boost social services — now THERE IS WORK FOR PEOPLE (are you listening, Congress??)

Lack of support

John Lackey / GETTY IMAGES

Lackey again gets no run support in loss to Detroit

John Lackey gave up three runs on seven hits over seven-plus innings but Boston's bats fell silent in a 3-0 loss to the Tigers yesterday at Fenway Park.

Detroit's Doug Fister baffled the Red Sox lineup, allowing just four hits on the day. The Sox threatened in the seventh but Jarrod Saltalamacchia bunted into a force-out at third.

"We were doing anything to get guys in scoring position," said Sox manager John Farrell.

Buffalo blah

Bills' Johnson says Pats can't stop him

Buffalo Bills wide receiver Stevie Johnson fired the first verbal shot of the 2013 season toward the Patriots yesterday.

"I don't think they have anybody to stop me," Johnson told The Buffalo News, just six days away from the season opener between the two AFC East rivals (1 p.m., CBS). "For real. I think we have guys in the receiver room that are as good as I am, if not better. I just have that confidence in my teammates and in myself."

When talking about the Patriots secondary, Johnson spoke about how much respect he has for Patrick Chung. The only problem is, Chung is now a member of the Philadelphia Eagles.

"I have a lot of respect for Chung," Johnson said. "I know him personally. [Devin] McCourty, he's a Pro Bowl player. ... It's going to be tough but I'll still ride with my boys over their guys." MATT BURKE

MLB power rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Braves (83-53)

There is no change at the top this week as the Braves continue to play consistent ball while maintaining their grip on the NL East lead. Despite losing Sunday, the Braves have won six of their last seven and continue to receive tremendous pitching as the calendar inches toward October. In five of the six wins they allowed two runs or less.

No. 2

Red Sox (82-56)

The Sox were able to distance themselves from the rest of the AL East this past week and now hold a 5.5 game lead over the Rays.

No. 3

Dodgers (81-55)

L.A. rebounded from a bit of a down week as they are now winners of five of their last six. Their offense is now averaging 4.05 runs per game.

No. 4

Tigers (80-57)

Detroit has a significant lead over the Indians in the AL Central but the Tigers have lost four of their last seven games.

No. 5

Cardinals (79-57)

One thing St. Louis will need to be aware of is a lack of offense; in nine of its last 10 losses it has scored three runs or less.

No. 6

Pirates (79-57)

The Pirates are second in the NL in runs allowed per game at just 3.5. They're in a tie with the Cards for first in the NL Central.

No. 7

Rangers (79-57)

The Rangers own a one-game lead over the A's in the AL West. Their offense has been hot lately, averaging 5.83 runs in their last 14 games.

No. 8

Athletics (78-58)

Oakland has won three in a row and seven of its last 10 games to now only trail the Rangers by one game.

No. 9

Reds (76-61)

Cincy is struggling at the wrong time as it has lost six of its last nine games to fall 3.5 games back in the division.

No. 10

Rays (75-60)

If the season ended today, the Rays would be one of the wild card teams in the AL. Tampa has received good pitching despite its recent struggles.

No. 11

Orioles (72-63)

Losers of five of its last eight games, Baltimore might need to shift its attention to the wild card as they now trail the Red Sox by 8.5 games.

No. 12

Indians (72-64)

Cleveland is losing ground in the AL Central, having lost five of six including two-of-three to the division-leading Tigers this past weekend.

No. 13

Yankees (71-64)

If they want a wild card spot, the Yanks' offense will need to do better than its average of 3.99 runs per game.

Best of the rest

- No. 14 Royals (70-66) A sudden second-half surge has placed the surprising Royals just 5.5 games out of a wild card spot.
- No. 15 D'Backs (69-66) Arizona clearly has no shot at the NL West title because of the Dodgers, but they are staying alive in the wild card race, six games out.
- No. 16 Nationals (68-67) Like the Diamondbacks, the Nationals are out of their division race but are holding out hope for a late surge.
- No. 17 Rockies (65-73) They have no shot at the postseason but they have won five of their last seven games.
- No. 18 Phillies (62-75) The Phillies have struggled on the road this year with a 27-44 record, a major reason why Philly has been a disappointment.

Stenson wins crown at TPC

Henrik Stenson blew past Sergio Garcia in the fourth and final round of the Deutsche Bank Championship at TPC Boston in Norton, Mass., to win the 2013 title. The Swede drilled a bunker shot on 17 to hold off Steve Stricker, who finished second. Stenson finished with a 5-under 66 yesterday and was 22-under for the tourney. Garcia was 2-over yesterday and finished tied for fourth.
